

A personal message from Jamison Green to anyone who sent e-mail in 2006:

If I have not responded to your email, please accept my apology and resend your message. I experienced a number of computer hard disk problems during the year and lost a significant amount of mail, including messages from old friends with whom I would really enjoy reconnecting. You know who you are. I sincerely regret any inconvenience these technical problems have created.

Also, it has come to my attention that spammers have been sending junk mail using my domain name. If you are looking at this site to see who sent you some obnoxious spam mail, it wasn't me, and I'm sorry for the inconvenience you've experienced. It is my policy NOT to send unsolicited mail to people I don't know. Again, my apologies.
